PINOT NOIR

THE BLUE GRAND CANYON

The Pacific Ocean profoundly impacts life in and around its waters. This is most evident with a geological marvel, the Blue Grand Canyon, that lies underneath Monterey Bay and links the sea to grape cultivation. Serving as a climatic pathway, this profound canyon connects the ocean to all four wine-growing regions that stretch southward down the Salinas Valley. With an estimated volume of 300 cubic miles of deep, cold water, the canyon exerts a vast weather influence on these regions, expressed through fog, wind and limited rainfall throughout the grape growing season.

ESTATE VINEYARDS

Our northern-most estate vineyards, where the dance of cool morning fog, followed by the embrace of driving winds and radiant sunshine in the afternoon, create an environment like no other. Here, our estate-grown Pinot Noir grapes embark on a slow and even ripening journey, culminating in a symphony of well-balanced, complex and concentrated fruit flavors that define the essence of Blue Canyon wines.

TASTING NOTES

Medium-bodied and approachable with a silky texture and long, layered finish. Lush and elegant cherry and raspberry flavors show on the palate with hints of vanilla, oak spice and rose petal on the nose.
